REMEDY OF SECOND LAST RESORT? REMANDING THE AWARD TO THE ARBITRAL TRIBUNAL

by Jeet Shroff & Abhik Chakraborty

I. INTRODUCTION

A recent US Court of Appeals decision in *Smarter Tools Inc. v. Chongqing SENCI Import & Export Trade Co., Ltd.*¹ has recast the spotlight on the functus officio doctrine, which holds that an arbitrator loses the competence to reconsider questions submitted for arbitration once an award is issued² because it is necessary to prevent “re-examination of an issue by a nonjudicial officer potentially subject to outside communication and unilateral influence.”³ The issue of what remedy parties have for arbitral awards that are or could be successfully set aside on non-substantive grounds is critical from the point of view of efficiency and litigation costs. The issue has divided scholars: one view is that the only remedy available to parties is to have the award vacated;⁴ another view is that the doctrine is outmoded and needs to be junked outright.⁵ However, caselaw from the United States and India points toward an alternative to this all or nothing approach. In several cases now, American and Indian courts have employed innovative legal reasoning to bring the dispute to a close without requiring parties to go through arbitration all over again. We examine some of these cases and distill the principles that could form the basis for consistent application.

II. THE US POSITION ON REMISSION OF AN AWARD

In late January 2023, in Smarter Tools Inc. v. Chongqing SENSI Import & Export Trade Co., Ltd., the US Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit (“Second Circuit”) upheld a district court ruling that remanded an ICDR arbitration award to the arbitrator notwithstanding the functus officio doctrine.⁶ Despite finding that the arbitrator had failed to issue a reasoned award (as he was required to do under contract), the district court did not vacate the award. Instead, it remanded the award to the arbitrator for a clarification of his findings. The reasoned award subsequently issued by the arbitrator was then confirmed.⁷

Overruling arguments that the arbitrator had become functus officio, the Second Circuit noted that US Circuit Courts of Appeal have recognized several exceptions to the functus officio doctrine such as ambiguity,⁸ indefiniteness,⁹ failure to address a later arising contingency,¹⁰ clarification¹¹ and to assist the reviewing court to determine if the arbitrator had manifestly disregarded the law.¹² In this case, the Second Circuit noted that the original award lacked reasoning and the remand was thus justified as it sought only a clarification (and not a substantive modification of the award). According to the Second Circuit, it simply made “no sense to redo an entire arbitration” in such circumstances. The Second Circuit thus held that, given the presumption in favor of enforcing an award, the arbitrator’s failure to render a reasoned award did not fall under the narrow reading of Section 10(a)(4) of the Federal Arbitration Act¹³ (“FAA”) and did not require that the original award be vacated. Instead, a failure to issue a reasoned award, made the award “imperfect in matter of form not affecting the merits of the controversy”¹⁴ bringing it within the purview of Section 11 of the FAA, which justified a remand of the award.

III. THE INDIAN POSITION ON REMISSION OF AN AWARD

Indian courts have taken a similar approach. Under Section 34(4) of the Indian Arbitration Act, 1996 (“Arbitration Act”) when deciding an application for setting aside or vacating an award, Indian courts can remand the award to the tribunal to take measures to “eliminate the grounds for setting aside the arbitral award.” We will refer to this as the Section 34(4) Exception.¹⁵

Whether the Section 34(4) Exception allows courts to remit an award for lack of adequate reasoning is a question that recently came up before the Indian Supreme Court in *Dyna Technologies v. Crompton Greaves Ltd.*¹⁶ In Dyna, an award was vacated by the Madras High Court on the merits on the basis that the award was not within the terms of the contract. The High Court also held that the award lacked proper reasoning. On appeal, the Supreme Court reversed the High Court’s decision on the basis that “courts should not interfere with an award merely because an alternative view on facts and interpretation of contract exists.”¹⁷ The Supreme Court further held that the High Court should not have ignored the Section 34(4) Exception since the primary grievance of the award debtor was that the award had gaps in reasoning.¹⁸ The Supreme Court ruled that the Section 34(4) Exception must be applied where an award “does not provide any reasoning or if the award has some gap in the reasoning or otherwise and that can be cured so as to avoid a challenge based on the aforesaid curable defects under Section 34,” whereas a vacation of the award under Section 34 can only take place “when there is complete perversity in the reasoning.”¹⁹

The Supreme Court accordingly identified three categories of awards for the purpose of ascertaining whether a remand is appropriate: perverse, unintelligible and poorly reasoned awards. Perverse awards or awards revealing a fundamental flaw in reasoning or the decision-making process are liable to be challenged on the grounds for vacation, since remanding such an award would amount to directing a reconsideration of the case. In contrast, unintelligible awards (i.e., awards having no reasoning as defined by the Court) or awards with gaps in reasoning can be cured by remanding the awards to the tribunal under the Section 34(4) Exception.

That said, the dispositive portion of Dyna is inconsistent with its ratio—unintelligible awards cannot be enforced as they first need to be cured by remitting it to the tribunal. On the facts, the Court found the award to be unintelligible as it was rendered “without reasoning” and was “confusing and ha[s] jumbled the contentions, facts and reasoning without appropriate distinction”. However, the award was neither set aside nor was it remanded. The Court instead partially enforced the award²⁰ as it held that “remand would not be beneficial as this case has taken more than 25 years for its adjudication.”²¹ In so holding, the Court failed to apply its own reasoning to cure the defect in the award.

On an aside, it is worth noting that in exceptional circumstances, the Indian Supreme Court, under Article 142 of the Constitution (“Article 142”), has powers to take decisions in the interest of justice, even if it is not rooted in any statute. In the past, the Supreme Court has invoked Article 142 to enforce a minority award after setting aside the majority award on public policy grounds, as it felt that referring the parties for fresh arbitration would cause further delay.²² However, in Dyna, the Supreme Court did not refer to Article 142 at all.

²⁰ Id. ¶¶ 12, 44. The Supreme Court’s final direction was: “In totality of the matter, we consider it appropriate to direct the Respondents to pay a sum of Rs. 30,00,000/- (Rupees Thirty Lakhs only) to the Appellant in full and final settlement against claim No. 2 within a period of 8 weeks, failing which the Appellant will be entitled to interest at 12% per annum until payment, for providing quietus to the litigation.” This was a partial enforcement of the award as the arbitrator had awarded a sum of Rs. 27,78,125/- with interest at 18% p.a. with its Award dated 30th April, 1998 and Correction to Award dated May 5, 1998.

IV. CONCLUSION

Both India and the United States have applied innovative tests to avoid a full-fledged arbitration when tribunals issue awards that are unreasoned or poorly reasoned. In so doing, both have recognized that the cost of vacating an unreasoned or unintelligible award in the first instance are significant and avoidable. Courts thus are instead encouraged to remand the award to the tribunal so that the gaps in reasoning can be plugged by the tribunal itself. Given that the tribunal is not required to make any substantive changes to its decision, this solution does not erode the functus officio doctrine's purpose, which is to prevent arbitrators from changing their rulings under an outside influence.

Nevertheless, it is not ideal if, as in Dyna, a court dons the tribunal's hat instead of remanding the award and, as a result, enforces an unintelligible award by either supplying its own reasoning or through some other means. This approach runs counter to the principle of party autonomy and is not necessary given the existence of this simple, yet effective solution of remand.

INSTITUTE FOR TRANSNATIONAL ARBITRATION OF
THE CENTER FOR AMERICAN AND INTERNATIONAL LAW

The Institute for Transnational Arbitration (ITA) provides advanced, continuing education for lawyers, judges and other professionals concerned with transnational arbitration of commercial and investment disputes. Through its programs, scholarly publications and membership activities, ITA has become an important global forum on contemporary issues in the field of transnational arbitration. The Institute's record of educational achievements has been aided by the support of many of the world's leading companies, lawyers and arbitration professionals. Membership in the Institute for Transnational Arbitration is available to corporations, law firms, professional and educational organizations, government agencies and individuals.

A. MISSION

Founded in 1986 as a division of The Center for American and International Law, the Institute was created to promote global adherence to the world's principal arbitration treaties and to educate business executives, government officials and lawyers about arbitration as a means of resolving transnational business disputes.

B. WHY BECOME A MEMBER?

Membership dues are more than compensated both financially and professionally by the benefits of membership. Depending on the level of membership, ITA members may designate multiple representatives on the Institute's Advisory Board, each of whom is invited to attend, without charge, either the annual ITA Workshop in Dallas or the annual Americas Workshop held in a different Latin American city each year. Both events begin with the Workshop and are followed by a Dinner Meeting later that evening and the ITA Forum the following morning - an informal, invitation-only roundtable discussion on current issues in the field. Advisory Board Members also receive a substantial tuition discount at all other ITA programs.

Advisory Board members also have the opportunity to participate in the work of the Institute's practice committees and a variety of other free professional and social membership activities throughout the year. Advisory Board Members also receive a free subscription to ITA's quarterly law journal, World Arbitration and Mediation Review, a free subscription to ITA's quarterly newsletter, News and Notes, and substantial discounts on all ITA educational online, DVD and print publications. Your membership and participation support the activities of one of the world's leading forums on international arbitration today.

C. THE ADVISORY BOARD

The work of the Institute is done primarily through its Advisory Board, and its committees. The current practice committees of the ITA are the Americas Initiative Committee (comprised of Advisory Board members practicing or interested in Latin America) and the Young Arbitrators Initiative Committee (comprised of Advisory Board members under 40 years old). The ITA Advisory Board and its committees meet for business and social activities each June in connection with the annual ITA Workshop. Other committee activities occur in connection with the annual ITA Americas Workshop and throughout the year.

D. PROGRAMS

The primary public program of the Institute is its annual ITA Workshop, presented each year in June in Dallas in connection with the annual membership meetings. Other annual programs include the ITA Americas Workshop held at different venues in Latin America, the ITA-ASIL Spring Conference, held in Washington, D.C., and the ITA-IEL-ICC Joint Conference on International Energy Arbitration. ITA conferences customarily include a Roundtable for young practitioners and an ITA Forum for candid discussion among peers of current issues and concerns in the field. For a complete calendar of ITA programs, please visit our website at www.cailaw.org/ita.

E. PUBLICATIONS

The Institute for Transnational Arbitration publishes its acclaimed Scoreboard of Adherence to Transnational Arbitration Treaties, a comprehensive, regularly-updated report on the status of every country's adherence to the primary international arbitration treaties, in ITA's quarterly newsletter, News and Notes. All ITA members also receive a free subscription to ITA's World Arbitration and Mediation Review, a law journal edited by ITA's Board of Editors and published in four issues per year. ITA's educational videos and books are produced through its Academic Council to aid professors, students and practitioners of international arbitration. Since 2002, ITA has co-sponsored KluwerArbitration.com, the most comprehensive, up-to-date portal for international arbitration resources on the Internet. The ITA Arbitration Report, a free email subscription service available at KluwerArbitration.com and prepared by the ITA Board of Reporters, delivers timely reports on awards, cases, legislation and other current developments from over 60 countries, organized by country, together with reports on new treaty ratifications, new publications and upcoming events around the globe. ITAFOR (the ITA Latin American Arbitration Forum) A listserv launched in 2014 has quickly become the leading online forum on arbitration in Latin America.
